[MONTAGE OF PHOTOGRAPHS OF HAROLD WITH HIS FAMILY]

[HAROLD:] What's more dangerous, a man who isn't afraid of death or one who found everything to live for?

I asked him if he was proud of me.

He emphatically said, "Yes!" As he laid his pecan colored head on my chest.

And I went through my mind a thousand times to figure out what that could possibly mean, and every single example ended in motivation for me.

So, you may not be afraid to die, but I'm more afraid to let them down. And I found something to live for, which is a dangerous motor forever fueled.

See your thoughts may be involuntary but my actions are very calculated.

I was a man with a plan but now I'm a dad with a decree and you can't take that from me.

My sons wasn't raised by no coward, and they won't be one either.

If this be the measure of a man, the yardstick gon need way more meters.

I'll take it too far; so, they never come up short.

Because I found everything to live for.
